Paris Bars EEC Envoy At Security Meeting

By James Goldsborough PARIS, Feb. 2 (IHT) .-- France has no intention of allowing the European Economic Community to be represented as such at the forthcoming European Security Conference, it was learned today. Informed sources indicated that France would staunchly oppose the move that was called for by West Germany, earlier this week which would have allowed Common Market officials to participate in the security conference. Conrad Ablers, the West German government spokesman, said at a news conference Monday that Bonn believed that the en-larged Common Market of ten members should participate "in en appropriate fashion" at the en appropriate assistant as conference, preparations for which are expected to get under, way in Helsinki late this year. Mr. Ahlers said that Common Market officials already were engaged in conversations on the subject in Brussels. 'Absurd' Notion

Sources here indicated, how-ever, that France has not been participating in any such conver-sations in Brussels, and if it had been, it would have tried to block them. The French hold the notion of a Common Market presence at the security conference as absurd.

Preparations for the ESC are scheduled to begin among East and West European nations plus the United States and Canada as soon as the final Big Four Berlin accord is signed, probably sometime this spring. The full-fledged conference is not expected to get under way before next year.

The stakes in REC representation at the conference are more than symbolic. West Germany, inpressing for e Common Market presence, is trying to promote. the idea of political unity among: community members.

sibility for EEC political unity lies far in the future, and can only grow from the successes and essities of economic and monctary unity. Since each of the Common Market countries will be represented nationally at the security conference, the French do not see a need for a Common Market representative.

Moreover, the French are extremely sensitive to Soviet reactions to any ESC move in the direction of political unity. The French do not think there is any reason to upset the Soviet Union over a move that would be of no importance for the security con-

Great Paris Phone Caper Ends With 1-Hour Gabfest

By Jack Monet

PARIS, Feb. 2 (IHT).-The final 10-cent telephone call to New York in the Great Paris Telephone Rip-Off was made tonight. It lasted an hour, and then the police arrived.

Now the three telephones in the Publicis Drugstore on the Avenue des Champs-Elysées at Place Charles de Gaulle-used for four months for apparently thousands of telephone calls to the United States and Europe for only the cost of a 55-centime token-hang sadly from their hooks, the mouthpieces and earphones removed.

"It was the only way we could stop it," remarked an employee, talking with sangfroid of an episode that may have cost Publicis tens of thousands of dollars.

Minutes before, the man who made the last phone callnationality unknown—had provoked a scuffle, according to Drugstore employees, by insisting on making more phone calls. although by then the Drugstore knew it was the victim of the direct-dialing long-distance "freebie" calls.

The three telephone booths had become celebrated during the day, after the publication of a story in the International Herald Tribune revealing their existence in the Champs-Elysées area, but not the precise location. An informer had told the newspaper how e widening circle of Americans and Europeans had been using the three booths for calls throughout Europe and the United States since October.

The French press picked up the story during the day, the ultimate verification coming tonight when correspondents of Channel 1 of the government-operated French television network brought cameramen to the Drugstore and filmed a 10-cent conversation to their correspondent in New York.

According to employees of the Drugstore, the French Postal and Telephone Ministry informed Publicis tonight that it has been paying the bill for the long-distance calls. After a discussion with the police, the man who made the last call was let go without charges-by either the police or Publicis. How could the calls go undetected on the Publicis telephone bills? "We have 700 telephones in the building," an employee said. "It just didn't stand out on the bills."

A Conversation at a Bogside Hideout of the IRA

By Bernard D. Nossiter LONDONDERRY, Feb. 2 (WP)

by several intermediaries who made no effort to conceal where we were going and maintained only the barest semblance of security. No cameras would be allowed, I was told, and no right names would be given.

The Bogside, Derry's rubble-strewn Catholic slum, is their torf. The IRA leaders here claim that the British Army has not dared to move in the Bogside since it began interning men without charge or trial last August. This is an exaggeration. The paratroopers moved in with a vengeance last Sunday. But it is not far from the truth.

Each night the IRA leaders move their command post to the home of a different sympathizer.

They claim every Bogside house is open to them, a claim enforced by terror if necessary. My hosts were the leaders of the Derry Provisionals, the militant wing of the IRA. A rival branch with whom peace has just been made, the official IRA, is led by leftist theoreticians who, until recently at least, have eschewed terror tactics.

Troops to Halt New Ulster March

LONDON, Feb. 2 (UPI).-The government served notice today that it will use British troops to break up a planned civil-rights march in the Northern Ireland border town of Newry next Saturday.

A similar march in Londonderry last Sunday resulted in a bloodbath and the death of 13 civilians.

Defense Secretary Lord. Carrington told the House of Lords. There can be no one in this House who does not believe that this would be a most unwise and potentially disastrous decision, if it is decided to go ahead with the march at Newry.

"I carnestly ask the organizers to think again, and indeed to contemplate what a responsibility rests on their shoulders,"

Lord Carrington said the ban on marches is a right one.

"It must be upheld, and the security forces, therefore, will have no alternative but to halt and disperse any unauthorized . march that may be held, however difficult it may be."

Bernadette Devlin, independent nationalist member of the British Parliament, who took part in Sunday's march at Londonderry, has said she will march again at Newry Saturday despite the ban. Gerard Fitt, another Ulster nationalist member of Parliament, said he will do so, too.

"Zero Hour" Sought

CAIRO, Feb. 2 (NYT) .-Egyptian officials emphasized that the future course of Soviet-Egyptian relations will be determined by the outcome of Mr. Sadat's vigit to Moscow.

Mr. Sadat's primary objective is to obtain more interceptor aircraft and anti-aircraft missiles to shield Egypt's industry, power stations, transport and other vital facilities from Israeli air strikes.

The crucial nature of the Moscow talks to Egyptian strategy was underlined today by the publication of a speech by Mr. Sadat to troops at Aswan, in lower Egypt, two days ago. "I am delaying the zero hour until I meet with the Russians and discuss with them the international situation," Mr. Sadat told troops defending the Aswan area and its large dam and electric power station.

A Chill Mr. Sadat confirmed what was already widely known—that a chill settled over Egyptian-Soviet relations last summer after Mr. Sadat's arrest of former Vice-President Ali Sabry and other Moscow-backed officials. The chill worsened following a short-lived Communist take-over in the Sudan, which was suppressed with the assistance of Egyptian forces.

The "misunderstandings" were cleared up during his visit to Moscow in October, Mr. Sadat said, adding that the Soviet leaders had agreed to supply him with more weapons, but at a time of their choosing.

The weapons evidently never arrived because of Moscow's distraction by the war of India, its ally, against Pakistan. Mr. Sadat told the troops at Aswan that he foresaw a bolstering of the U.S. commitment to Israel to recover its big power prestige after tha defeat of its ally, Pakistan, and therefore informed Moscow that "the situation had changed" and that he must hold further talks with the Soviet leaders.

The reported decision of the United States to supply Israel with 40 more Phantom fighterbombers and 80 Skyhawks confirmed his apprehension, Mr. Sadat declared.

Mr. Sadat said he canceled plans for an offensive against Is-raeli forces in December because the balance of U.S.-Russian power in the Mideast had changed after the outbreak of the Indo-

Bobby Seale Says Panthers Want to Help Poor Whites

TTHACA, N.Y., Feb. 2 (AP).— Black Panther national chairman Bobby Seale says that the party wants to help poor whites as well as blacks and that it stands for a "chicken-in-everypot" program.

"Hating people for their skin color is stupid, is backward, is absurd," Mr. Seale told about 1,200 students at Cornell University last night,

Patrick, the 28-year-old leader of leaders, was a lean-jawed, black-haired man who spoke in slurred tones from the side of his mouth. Ha has been in the IRA only 9 months, indicating that the internment policy which has currently locked up 741 men in Northern Ireland, has sliced deeply into the ranks of experienced IRA officials.

I asked Patrick about this. He began to answer, then grinned weakly and said, "No comment." Patrick claimed that Derry's IRA has 300 soldiers in a population of 62,000. This is about three times as many as knowledgeable Bogsiders estimate are in the guerrilla army.

Bonanza for IRA But Sunday's events, when 13

civilians were killed after paratroopers opened fire, has clearly been a bonanza to the cause, "I. could not count how many have now asked me, 'How do you recruit, how can we get trained," said Patrick with grim satisfac-tion. "The lads are fed up with throwing stones and want to do something. They all want rereage. They want the British Army out. They were sympathizers before. Now they want to be recruits."

Both Patrick and Michael say by several hundred potential recruits since Sunday. Those numbers can be taken with a large grain of salt, but the fact that IRA leaders can circulate freely, almost openly, in the Bogside is a measure of their hold on this community. Patrick spat out the words:

"On Sunday the British showed are-murderers, liars, thieves." The same epithets, I pointed out had been applied to the IRA and by such eminent Irish leftists es Conor Cruise O'Brien. "They're just upper-class Irish" was Patrick's reply. "They have money and good jobs." Jack, the swarthy staff officer, said with a sneer:

"Conor Cruise O'Brien ... His social background wouldn't enable him to be a volunteer for the IRA." Priests' Condemnation

What of the priests in working-class parishes who continue to condemn IRA violence? "That's their training," Jack's uneasy response,

"They won't condemn us now," said Patrick. What purpose is served by hit-and-run bombings and killings, they were asked, particularly in view of Britain's overwhelming military superiority. Patrick replied: The reason for terrorist tactics is—it's hitting them finan-cially. And the Unionist government (the provincial Protestant regime in Belfast) is interested in money. "It has worked in every other country. It's bound to work in this country."

But these tactics kill and main innocent people, your own, don't

Patrick indicated that he had spent most of his working life, before turning to terror, in the British Army, but he would not supply any details. What does the Bogside really think of them? It is hard for an outsider to know. In private. Bogsiders complain that the IRA takes over for its "jobs" the few Ford Cortinas or other fast cars its citizens own. Some complain of being forced to pay IRA The police, however, won't go

Irish Minister at UN to Try To Force New U.K. Policy

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Feb. 2 (AP).—Declaring that the "British government has gone mad, Irish Foreign Minister Patrick J. Hillery today began a quest at the UN for international pressure for withdrawal of British troops from Northern Ireland.

He condemned Britain for "concentration camps, torture and killing people in the streets," and said he hoped to persuade other governments to convince Britain to change its policy in Northern Ireland. His biggest hope was for friendby governments to "teach some use" to the British government. He said they should tell Britain: "You're crazy. You're following a policy no same government can

Mr. Hillery told a news conference he was aware of restrictions in the UN Charter which prevent the UN from intervening in a domestic affair.

Therefore, he said, he would not ask for a Security Council meet-ing or seek the dispetch of UN observers or troops to quiet the Londonderry situation.

Mr. Hillery, who arrived last night, conferred this morning with C.V. Narasimhan, chef de cabinet for Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, who is attending a Security Council meeting in Addis Ababa Ethiopia. He said he would not comment on the possibility of UN action until Mr. Waldheim had studied the message given to Mr.

Mr. Hillery plans to go to Washington tomorrow for talks with Secretary of State William P. Rogers and later to Ottawa for conversations with Canadian officials. Then, he said, he plans visits to several European capitals. which he did not name.

In Washington, Britain's am-bassador, the Earl of Cromer, met Mr. Rogers tonight to discuss, among other matters, increasing congressional calls for a more active American role in the Irish situation. The meeting was hurriedly arranged et the request of Lord Cromer.

A Democratic leader in Congress today introduced a resolu-tion urging that UN peace-keeping troops be sent to Northern Ireland. Rep. Thomas O'Neill, of Massachusetts, assistant Democratic leader in the House, said the UN "may be able to achieve the stability and crder which three years of British military presence has been unable to pro-

Sato Wants 4 Isles As Price of Peace Pact With Russia

TOKYO, Feb. 2 (UPI),—Premier Eisaku Sato told parliament yes-terday that his government will not sign a World War II peace treaty with the Soviet Union unless the Russians return four islands just north of Japan.

Mr. Sato described the Kurlle Islands as Japanese territory and said he hoped the issue would be brought up at the Soviet-U.S. summit when President Nixon visits Moscow in May. "The government intends to sign a peace treaty with the Soviets," Mr. Sato told the Japanese House of Councillors, when a return of Habomai, Shikotan, Kunashiri and Etorofu is realized by the Soviet Union." The four islands off Japan's northern island of Hokkaido were

Nixon Wants Rural 'Oases' Of Business

By Carroll Kilpatrick . WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (WP) .-In order to stop urban sprawl and to half migration from the countryside to America's over-crowded cities, President Niron wants to start a major program to build "inisiness oases" in rural

Monday he asked Congress to approve a new $1.3-billion rural development credit program "to belp improve the quality of life in the American countryside."

Said the President: "I am today presenting a series of pro-posals designed to marshal more effectively the energies of the private sector and of government at all levels in a cooperative program of rural development." Mr. Nixon said the objective would be not only-to help farmers, but also to help business needed to revitalize rural areas.

"We have seen the folly of pouring money into projects which were ill-considered and lacking in local support," Mr. Nixon said. What is needed now is a fundamental change in the way gov-ernment approaches the entire developmental challenge."

Massive Migration' Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz said one of the tragedies of the last 30 years had been "the massive migration of people from rural areas to inner cities." "Obviously . you . can't . reverse that flow," he said, but "we do hope that by building viable, attractles with attractive employment opportunities it will be possible to stem that flow." The heart of the President's proposal is a plan to involve private enterprise and lending institutions in rural development

"We feel there just isn't enough money in the federal government to finance the kind of effort it will take to make these viable rural communities." Mr. Butz said. "We want to involve the private financial institutions and private business institutions to the maximum extent possible."

A new credit fund would pro-vide loans, loan insurance and loan guarantees to states for assisting development. Credit would be made available for up to 80 percent of the cost of establishing or improving businesses likely to stimulate growth in rural areas. This fund would also make loans and guarantees for sewer and water facilities and other public works and community facilities, such as industrial parks and community centers, which work directly or indirectly to improve employment opportunities," Mr. Nixon said.

House Approves $1.96 Billion in Multilateral Aid

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (WP). The House of Representatives: voted yesterday to put np $1.960 billion over the next three years for mutilateral economic aid to developing nations.

The three bills authorize $960 million in three annual installments to the World Bank's International Development Association, $900 million over two years to the Inter-American Development Bank and $100 million over two years to the Asian Development Bank

The money would be the United States' contribution to banks financed by a number of countries to make soft loans at low interest and with long repayment terms to help economic development in poorer nations.

Soft-loan funds of the Inter-American and Asian Banks are almost exhausted and the IDA has been operating on contributions from other nations because of congressional delay in acting on the measures.

a man of "courage." Frank Maniekewicz, Robert Kennedy's former press screeny and now spokesman for the Mc-Govern campaign, called the complaint "nonscree" and said

The commercial begins with Robert Kennedy's voice—unidentified there, or elsewhere on the tape—praising courage as "the first of human qualities."

Hughes Aides, Not Hughes, Likely to Get Subpoenas

NEW YORK, Feb. 2 (NYT) -State and federal investigators looking into the tangled case of the purported Howard R. Hughes autobiography are tentatively planning to subpoena top aides of the recluse industrialist rather than try to get Mr. Hughes himself before a grand jury.

Challenge of European Unity

that could evolve out of the accession to the Common Market treaty of Britain, Denmark, Norway and Ireland promises to alter profoundly the economic and political shape of the Atlantic community and the world. The American response is of critical importance.

A decade ago, when this prospect first arose, President Kennedy reached across the ocean to offer the hand of partnership to Western Europe. On Independence Day in 1962, he went to Philadelphia to proclaim a doctrine of interdependence with Europe. The Trade Expansion Act became the centerpiece of his legislative program for that year, and the Kennedy Round of negotiations reduced the tariffs of the world's industrial nations by one-third.

A broader agenda for joint action with Europe in the economic field was contemplated both in the Kennedy and Johnson administrations but sidetracked during the protracted struggle between France and its Common Market neighbors over British

A State Department attempt to revive this approach last year to head off 2 world monetary and trade crisis unfortunately came too late to achieve that objective. The task will be more difficult now after the distruct stirred abroad by Treasury Secretary Connally's four-month effort to advance "American interest first" and to bludgeon America's allies into unilateral concessions. But the year-end series of summit conferences, through which President Nixon terminated the crisis, has opened the way for a return to joint action with Western Europe and Japan in the common interest. Reform of the world monetary system already is projected. Reform of the trade rules established under GATT after World War II is under preliminary study by the high-level OECD trade group which has been meeting in Paris. A consensus evidently has developed there that monetary means.

The 10-nation United States of Europe such as more frequent exchange rate changes, should be used by countries with balance-of-payments crises instead of trade restrictions that stimulate protectionism. Another Kennedy Round or "Nixon Round" of tariff cuts undoubtedly will be recommended, but more daring initiatives also need exploration.

Movement toward zero industrial tariffs over the next two decades and a major attack on nontariff barriers are the only way to lessen the divisions now taking form between the three monetary and trade blocs -the dollar, yen and European blocs. An attempt to coordinate farm subsidy and production policies must supplant futile and simplistic efforts to deal with agricultural trade in a vacnum. Sharing the burdens both of aid to the developing countries and of Western defense also requires new approaches

Most difficult is the need to devise improved ways of harmonizing economic, financial and business-cycle policy. All this ultimately will require the construction of. new institutional links between the United States and West Europe, with Japan tied in as well. A first step might well take the form of the high-level standing committee on European-American cooperation urged for almost a decade by Jean Monnet's Action Committee and endorsed by five European parliaments. Such a body might well have defused the recent world monetary and trade crisis before it exploded.

The challenge Europe's unity poses to the United States is to find ways, as the institutions of the Common Market have, to achieve common rules and policies across the Atlantic and Pacific that enable American. European and Japanese companies to compete fairly both within and across national borders. That kind of healthy, invigorating competition cannot be accomplished by national rivalry, only by international coopera-unusual action in appointing the Lord Chief Justice of England to investigate the clashes that brought death to 13 men on Londonderry's "Bloody Sunday." That he has asked Britain's paramount judge to conduct the inquiry is a measure of Mr. Heath's anxiety over the charges of Ulster Catholics that British paratroops shot to kill without having been fired on first.

Mr. Heath is doubtless moved by the kind of concern for public opinion at home and around the world that persuaded President Johnson to ask Chief Justice Warren to bead the committee to investigate the murder of President Kennedy. Lord Widgery's task will be at least as difficult and much ionelier, for he will be a one-man tribunal. carrying out the kind of function that no lord chief justice bas been assigned for nearly 30 years.

Whatever the arguments about using an active paramount judge for such a purpose, Mr. Heath deserves credit for his zeal to get at the truth of the Derby tragedy. The fact that all the dead were civilians coupled with the report that the paratroops suffered only three casualties—and just one from gunshot wounds-makes it imperative to have the Prime Minister Heath has taken a highly most impeccable and judicial inquiry pos-

Some of the Catholic demonstrators on the banned march unquestionably did set out to provoke the soldiers; but disciplined troops do not open fire with live ammunition in response merely to taunts or rock-throwing. No one will envy Lord Widgery the task of trying to ascertain after the fact whether there was also widespread sniping at the troops, as the army contends.

If Mr. Heath deserves praise for Lord Widgery's appointment, however, it is less certain that he made the right move in opposing the Labor party's demand that the British government assume all responsibility for security in Northern Ireland. Such a shoving aside of the Stormont government would be painful, but it probably is inevitable. Indeed, if it had been done earlier, it might have helped the army preserve a more credible posture of nentrality in its difficult assignment.

To divide the House of Commons on Labor's motion serves merely to diminish the valuable measure of bipartisanship that Harold Wilson and others have worked hard to preserve on the Ulster issue.

Nepal's Problems

Two problems have exercised Nepal during the period of King Mahendra's rule: One was the country's foreign policy as a landlocked state bounded by China to the north and India to the south; the other was the continuing agitation for some system of representative government rather than the continuation of royal power. Now that his son. King Birendra, will succeed to that power, the questions that arise are whether these two problems will come alive again or whether an acceptable compromise has been reached which will now continue.

-From the Times (London). Alternatives for Rhodesia

The only real alternatives in Rhodesia are: Either a moral commitment by the Salisbury government to the Anglo-Rhodesian "proposals for a settlement," the elements of which are far more progressive than the Rhodesian Constitution of 1969, or the maintenance of the etatus quo. Once the agreement with London was signed, there would be no way of forcing the Rhodesian government to maintain any specific tempo of development, but the improvement of the blacks' legal position, as laid down in the proposals, would certainly be highly welcome in itself. Those wellintentioned people who are measuring the proposed agreement against ideals rather than real possibilities, and those ill-intentioned parties who would not like to grant Great Britain release from its knotty Rhodesian problem-with both these camps jointly trying to torpedo the agreementare at most doing a service to their own idealistic self-righteousness or their own resentments, but not to Rhodesia's black -From the Neue Zuercher Zeitung (Zurich).

The Vice-President didn't try to compete with Wallace. At a reception before his speech, he was stiff and formal. One Jaycee leader from Coral Gables said: "He gave you the impression you were lucky to be in the same room with him. And, of course, I did feel pleased to be in the same room."

Mr. Agnew's speech-serious. even solemn in tone-was a defense of President Nixon's defense and space policies against the budget-cutting thrust of the Democrats. in the IHT (Jan. 29-30) criticizing policies which promote economic growth will not rank as one of his better pieces. Indeed it should be a warning to all of us not to be hurried into nonconformist ideas simply because they are sponsor-ed by fashionable think-tank types like the Club of Rome. As a matter of fact their thesis—that the world's physical resources are being depleted to the point where our population cannot be sustained—is old, older than Malthus. But it is presented now in modern dress.

Mr. Lewis did not mention the current leading oracle of this theory, MIT's Prof. J.W. Forrester, nor his book "World Dynamics." the bible of the new zealots (and they are). However, a little exposure to his thinking will disclose that this approach rests om two macceptable premises. He and his colleagues assume that population growth will continue at a rapid pace despite continuing great progress in birth control devices—and that con-sumption of resources will likewise persist in the pattern of the past. despite new technology which is resulting, for example, in atomic energy replacing coal as a fuel for power plants. made fun of a figure widely discussed as his possible replace-ment on the Republican ticket— Secretary of the Treasury Connally. And it is easy to see why the Vice-President takes the subject so lightly.

Mr. Connally, judging by a chat in Washington last week, likes the action at the highest levels of government. He is not unaware of the historic things he has done in his short term of service as Secretary of the Treasury. He rightly believes that he can do more in the same vein -perhaps, someday, as Secretary of State.

Not a Candidate

But he does not expect to hold elective office again. Indeed, he wants to take himself out of the partisan zone-the better to contime distinguished service in the foremost appointive posts. If he did leave his Treasury job before the election, it would be at least partly for that reason. Certainly it is very hard to see Mr. Connally comfortably handling the second-banana assignments that

Don't Expect Too Much'

Nixon Turns to China

By James Reston

on is now concentrating on his forthcoming visit to China —the great diplomatic experiment of his first term in office. He is working his way through a mountain of briefing papers, studying the transcripts of the Kissinger-Chou En-lai conversations, and quietly putting out the word not to expect too much from this month's spectacular journey.

-The history of these postwar summit meetings suggests that this is a prudent warning. The Eisenhower-Khrushchev conference at Geneva, the Johnson-Konygin session at Glassboro, N.J., and the Kennedy-Khrushchev confrontation at Vienna all produced great expectations and even greater disappointments. Nixon has gone through all these records too, which helps explain why he is protecting himself now against a let-down at the end of the month.

None of those other summits was prepared with such meticulous care as Nixon's mission to Peking. He has been working up to this almost from his first few months in the White House. and he has not only been studying the problem, but acting to create a favorable atmosphere for his discussions with the Chinese

A Camble

His disclosure of his efforts to reach a negotiated settlement in Vietnam is only the latest of these acts. It was a gamble to publicise Dr. Kissinger's secret negotiations with the Vietnamese Communists, and it irritated Hanol, but the President wanted Peking to know that he had been trying to reach a compromise settlement before he arrived in the Chinese capital. Nixon has already bet quite a lot on this Peking trip. By keeping it searet until the last minute of Kissinger's first trip to Peking, he irritated the Japanese and the Soviet Union, and undoubtedly helped start the negotiations between Moscow and Tokyo for a Japanese-Soviet relationship. Similarly, he sided with Pakistan against India in the recent war, at least partly to evold a split with Peking on this issue. With-out his spectacular moves toward Peking, it is highly doubtful that Taiwan would have been expelled from the United Nations, and even now other U.S. allies in Asia, particularly South Korea, and Thalland are measy over the Nixon-Chou talks.

On balance, then, it would seem that China has already gained a good deal even from the preliminames to the Peking trip. It has established itself on the UN, it has reminded Moscow that tha ing of the election polls and other indicators. If he is in serious days of Chinese isolation are over and that the United States is trouble-particularly on unemtaking an interest in China and ployment—he might feel obliged in new security relations in Asia; to strengthen the ticket with a it has loosened the ties between Washington and Tokyo and be-Rockefeller or a Connally. Despite Nixon's publication of his peace terms for Vietnam, the chances are that he will get no support in Peking for any such accommodation, but rather a cool lecture on ending the killing and a recommendation that he accept the enemy's terms and get out of Indochina. On Taiwan, he is almost certain to be asked why he still has geveral thousand troops in what Chou En-lai considers a province of Chins, and how would Nixon like it if China stationed troops in Hawaii or Long Island? On Japan, the Chinese government's view is that the U.S. is reviving the militarism of the Japanese people and helping the Japanese to put together by force of arms n World War II. So the President is undoubtedly right to minimize the expectations of the American people before he leaves. He may manage to arrange for cultural exchanges between China and the United States, and negotiate some kind of exchange of trade missions or trade agents to explore the possibilities of increasing the commerce between the two countries, establish by economic means the "co-prosperity sphere" they tried but even this is not sure. In the end, however, the imponderables of these talks may prove to be more important than anything else. We are still far from normalization of U.S.-Chinese diplomatic relations, but the long process of exchanging views and establishing some means of orderly communication will have

Sino-Soviet Dispute

Also, it is not clear what part the Sino-Soviet dispute has played in China's willingness to break the long deadlock with Washing !. ... ton. That Peking is concerned over the presence of a million Soviet troops on its northern frontier is obvious from the fact that it is already building deep bunkers and underground shelters in all its main cities, but this is not the sort of dispute Nixon wants to enter.

After all, he is going on in this year of summits and elections from Peking to Moscow, and it is his purpose, not to take sides in the Sino-Soviet troubles, but to improve Washington's relations with both China and the Soviet Union, and if possible to lessen the tensions between the two Communist giants,

All this, however, will take some doing and some time. The President has been careful to reassure Moscow, Tokyo, London, Paris, Bonn, Seoul and Taipel that he is not going to Peking to make deals at the expense of any of his allies, but merely to reduce tensions wherever he can. And if he can do that, it will be a back nothing more than a cultural agreement and a little more trust that China and America

The Lindsay Surprise in Arizona

By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

PHOENIX, Ariz.—On Jan. 17. two days before the filing deadline for last Saturday's primary vote for delegates to the Democratic state convention, Son. Edmund Muskie had a solid. slate of 23 pledged Mexican-American candidates in the 28th

Assembly District of Phoenix. That day, operatives working stealthily for Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York quite literally stole the 15 best known of those 23 candidates. Included in the theft was the state's No. 1 Chicano politician: George Cas-tillo, who heads an activist Mexican-American political group called Nosotros, or "us."

Not even Muskie's own Arizona managers claim the theft was based on monetary reward. It resuited, rather, from a shrewd, secretive Lindsay operation under overall direction of a New York Democratic activist named Art. Kaminsky, schooled in the new youth-and-minority politics of former Rep. Allard K. Lowen-

Kaminsky's Ploy

Kaminsky's ploy in the heavily Chicano precincts of the 28th District delivered all those 15 Muskie delegates to Lindsay in the party's Feb. 12 convention, which will select this state's 25 convention delegates to Mismi Beach next summer.

It was just such pinpointed tactics in areas of heavy Mexican, black and college voters that allowed Lindsay's astute managers to elect 118 of the 500 delegates to the state convention, far more than anybody dreamed possible. The result was a disappointment for front-runner Muskie and a catestrophe for the na-tional AFI-CIO effort to elect an uncommitted slate of dele-

To put the mayor's triumph in perspective, Arizona is a small state with an idiosyncratic avatem of picking delegates that favored his operation. Nevertheless, his first electoral test outside New York was the first good cheer for Lindsay since leaving his ancestral Republican home. If his campaign for president seemed dead -before Arizona, it now shows signs of life.

Although Lindsay's showing was strongest with youth and minority votes, he also won in the blue-collar areas of West Phoenix, electing half a dozen construction workers and department store employees pledged to The Lindsay high command now crows over these break-throughs as a sign that the mayor can do what Robert F. Kennedy did in 1968: build coalition of minority, youth and blue-collar whites. On the strength of Lindsay's performauce, some advisers want him to enter the blue-collar-oriented Pennsylvania primary on April

Comparing John Lindsay to Bobby Kennedy seems premature, however, Arizona was peculiarly suited to Lindsay's last-minute campaign blits in which each dollar spent by Lindsay's media campaign was made to pay. Thus, Lindsay's billboard campaign (sneered at by party pros here) guaranteed saturation coverage in Phoenix and Tucson and the college towns of Tempe and Flagstaff, heartland of Lind-say's votes. Total cost of those billboards ("Vote Lindsay; Arizona Likes a Fighter") plus a barrage of 30-second radio and TV spots featuring the candidate himself came to only $17,400 a pittance compared to similar aturation coverage for a state the size of Pennsylvania.

Furthermore, the cumulative voting system adopted for the primary here (each voter having between 12 and 26 votes to "bulbetween 13 and 20 votes to "Dul-let vote" or distribute as he wished) plus the low turnout (about 10 percent of 300,000 registered Democrats) put a premium on expert advance planning. Kaminsky assigned Lindsay agents to each polling booth tabulate estimated votes for each Lindsay candidate during the voting. When one Lindsay candidate reached the desired total, Lindsay voters were ordered to cast all their votes for the next candidate. No votes were

The success of this calculation was breathtaking. In the 30th district, Muskie received votes but elected only eight delegates to the state convention. The uncommitted, labor-backed slate won 3,700 votes and two delegates. But Lindsay, with only 2,153 votes, elected four delegates In short, Lindsay made every vote count while Muskie and the uncommitted slete wasted hundreds of ballots—taking advantage of the peculiar cumulative voting.

But the fact that Lindsay's managers were by far the shrewdest in taking that advantage and making Lindsay's media appeal pay off reveals technical competence in his presidential campaign. Thus, though Arizona was no disaster for Muskie, it was the first faint sign that the Lindsay campaign has any viability.

The Prague district court found that Mr. Lederer, who wrote for such liberal Czech magazines as Reporter and Listy before he was purged from journalistic activity after the 1968 Soviet invasion, spread "slanderous information about Poland in the press and also in conversation with a foreign journalist, even though he knew that it would be abused for hostile propaganda abroad," GTK suid.

Bonn Deputies Ask Direct Vote For the European Parliament

By Joe Alex Morris Jr.

German parliamentarians yesterday proposed a law calling for the direct election of the country's 36 representatives to the European Parliament. The intent is to firm up the feeble political power of the European Economic Community. Deputies to the European Parliament, which meets in Strasbourg, now are selected by various national assemblies from their own members. The European Parliament has only minor direct responsibilities in connection with Common Market finances, but these are programmed to grow over the next few years.

The German deputies, in tabling their proposal, called it "a pressing necessity."

"Without stronger and more democratic community institutions

there will be no economic and currency union." they added. "The broadening of the commu-nity will not lead to the hopedfor results unless it is accompanied by an internal buildnp."

The backers of the proposal were all members of the opposition Christian Democratic Union, but BONN, Feb. 2.—Some 200 West they specifically avoided making it a one-party proposal. In fact, Foreign Minister Walter Scheel publicly endorsed the idea of direct elections recently, and the Social Democrats are also for it in principle.

The Social Democrats said that "out of fairness," the proposal should be put off until the four new member nations of the EEC have ratified the Brussels Treaty. They also pointed out that direct election to the European Parliament did not in itself automatically increase the powers of the European Parliament.

The Christian Democrat move was designed to show the party's dedication to European unity in the face of the government's flirtation with the East. It is also the first formal petition anywhere in the community for direct election to the European Parliament Political sources here thought the government was unlikely to oppose the proposal. It would not effective until the 1973 elections here, by which time the four new members should be safely in community. 6 Los Angeles Times

Unit to Stay In Rhodesia

Pearce Commission Is Backed at UN

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia, Feb. 2 (AP).—Britain, backed by the United States and France told the United Nations Security Council today that it intended to keep its controversial opiniontesting commission in Rhodesia and that Rhodesian Africans want the commission to stay.

British Ambassador Sir Colin Crowe said the Pearce Commission was giving Rhodesian blacks their first chance in years to give their views on the white minority regime in Salisbury.

Without the commission, U.S. Ambassador George Bush said, "the real heartbeat of Rhodesia might have remained insudible to the outside world."

The Africans submitted to the Security Council late today a resolution calling on Britain to scrap the settlement and to call constitutional conference-including Africans—on the columns future. The resolution did not refer specifically to the Pearce Cota-mission, but Britain has indicated privately that it will veto the African proposals. Britain last December vetoed a council condemnation of the settlement. Formal discussion of the African resolution was expected to begin tomorrow.

"I know that there are many here who object to the Pearce Commission... because it is part of an arrangement which they cannot bring themselves to ap-prove." Sir Colin told the 15-nation council. "They will not expect me to follow them in this." Sir Colin said Britain's record over the years in granting free-dom to its former colonies has been good, and that Britain and African states did not differ on goals, "only about means," Sir Colin urged council members to "break away from stereo-typed ideas."

"All these words such as colo nialist, neo-colonialist, imperialist, anti-imperialist, social-imperialist, social traitor and so on are labels that people are ready to hang around any neck other than their own," he said.

Janacek In Hamburg --- ALandmark

By David Stevens AMBURG (IHT).—The pro-duction just mounted here of Leos Janacek's final opera, "From the House of the Dead," will-if there is any justice in this world -be looked back on as one of the landmarks of 20th-century musical theater, one of the crowning achievements of Rolf Liebermann's illustrious regime at the Hamburg State Opera, and an important step toward establishing Janacek as a major figure in the operatic firmament.

The problem with Janacek is that he does not fit into any operatic mold, and certainly not the dominant German or Italian ones. His music springs from the world's sounds, especially the sounds of human speech, and more specifically of the Czech language acutely heard, meticulously noted throughout a lifetime. and powerfully transformed into a musical language that is strangely effective and affecting.

If Janacek had a model it was Mussorgaky, who found his music in similar sources, and who suf-fered similar misunderstanding from his own friends and disciples. It was no coincidence, then, that Rafael Kubelik, who last month conducted a de-Rimskyized "Boris Godunov" in Munich should perform the same service here for his own countryman Janacek.

The Revision

Janacek substantially completed "From the House of the Dead" shortly before his death in 1938, but the originality of his musical language and doubts about its actual state of completion led two of his pupils to undertake a fundamental revision, including a new and more optimistic ending. Even a relatively recent biography could speak of the instrumental revision as "absolutely necessary."

It is Kubelik's view-and not only his-that this instrumental revision was fundamentally false, and his concert performance in Munich in 1961 of his own reconstruction of the original score was a first step in restoring this work to its original form. He also canceled the less understandable optimistic ending. The work is based on Dostoevski's semi-autobiographical novel of life in a Siberian prison camp, and the ending in Janacek's own libretto has the prisoners see one of their number go free, then symbolically set free an eagle they have captured and kept caged, then return to the eternal pointless drudgery of the prison camp. No apotheosis of freedom, then, but life as it is and not without special polgnancy for a

Tom Krause (Goryantshikov), Peter Haage (Alyeya) in "From the House of the Dead."

Another problem of the work that there is no real hero. "Boris" may be played as a star opera or as a "people's" opera, but here there is only the mass of prisoners out of which, from time to time, one emerges to tell his story, to reveal his personality, and even the ugliest is humanly touching. This is matched by Janacek's profound humanism, specifically revealed in the phrase he wrote on the first page of the score-"In every person a spark

The production here was splendidly integrated, not only from the theatrical point of view of closest collaboration between the musical, scenic and technical personnel, but also in its response to both the realistic and the symbolic levels of the work,

John Dexter's staging powerfully accented the grim grayness of the prison camp, yet brought out sharply the character of each prisoner who had his say. The ambivalence of life was always present. When Goryantshikov, the political prisoner, arrived in the almost smugly aristocratic profile presented by Tom Krause, the simultaneous sympathy and Schadenfreude among the pris-oners toward his humiliation was almost tangible.

Josef Syoboda's lighting was an integral tool in Dexter's accomplishment, and his set of logs, which formed the imprisoning palisade, the heavy weight of the inmates' work, and even the benches on which they sit, was no less so. Jan Skalicky's costumes and makeup both suggested the prisoners' gray sameness. but also their varying states of decrepitude in confinement and their varying abilities at scrounging meager comforts.

Propelling all at the first performance Sunday was Kubelik's assionately committed musical leadership, which went so far as to reconcile somehow the Czechinspired accents of Janacek's music with the altogether different stresses of Max Brod's German translation. Appearing at the Hamburg theater for the first time, Kubelik was greeted. by an ovation, which was nothing compared to that at the end.

Krause was outstanding as the political prisoner who arrives and leaves in the course of the action, providing a tenuous link for the other prisoners with the outside Richard Cassilly, Peter Haage, Willy Caron, Kurt Marsch-ner, Helmut Melchert, Herbert Filether, Norman Mittelmann and several others drew sharply defined characters in the few moments allotted them.

Some of the final applause can be explained by the delayed re-performance of the three-act work without an intermissioneach entracte being marked by a kind of tableau vivant in which a screen of plodding prisoners formed the curtain. Some of it can be explained by the fact that Hamburg has the most sympathetic and progressive sudience for modern opera to be found anywhere.

It is too bad that plans for a recording based on this production as with the Hamburg "Salome" under Karl Böhm earlier this year-have reportedly fallen through.

By coincidence, or perhaps not, the following night brought a performance of Berg's "Wozseck," which was the first important production of this work in Germany after the war and which has been maintained in the repertory in Hamburg for almost 20 years. The Günther Rennert staging is now kept up to date by Toni Blankenheim, himself the excellent Woszeck, and Bruno Maderna was on hand to attend to musical matters. The possibility of seeing these two productions on successive nights is a measure of the continuity that is still possible in a real repertory house with a stable ensembleand at the same time a measure of the task confronting Liebermann when he comes to Paris

PARIS FASHION—

The Problems of the Press And the Dilemma of Couture

By Hebe Dorsey

PARIS, Feb. 2 (IHT).—Unless cross the Atlantic, are in a worse fashion professionals do somefix than the English fashion thing fast, Paris may lose its press. A number have already position as the fashion center of Since 1947, when the late Christian Dior exploded his New Look on the scene, Paris conture has had more than its share of headlines. No more. After last week's miscellaneous and often scrappy performance, the foreign press-and most particularly the Ameri-can press—is questioning the va-lidity of extensive coverage.

The buyers were as numerous as ever, according to the Chambre Syndicale de la Couture Pari-sienne. Be that as it may, the buyers come to buy—to meet cus-tomer demand. There is no denying that daily newspapers, as well as fashion magazines, have contributed to creating that demand.

New York designer Oscar de la Renta said in a recent Harper's Bazaar interview that American designers were underrated by both buyers and press. "Those ladies going to Paris twice a year and free of charge have seen to that," he said bluntly. "Your magazine sends you to cover the French collections," he went on "You stay at a superb hotel, have splendid nights out, wonderful dinner parties. The collections are marvelous because you are having a wonderful time . . .

"Well," he continued, "on Seventh Avenue . . . at best you could go downstairs to a very noisy cafeteria and have a very bad sandwich. So you are not going to tell your magazine: Don't bother to send me to Paris. The fashions are as good or better

Hard to Justify

Politics aside, Mr. de la Renta has something there. For all the ssons he mentions, plus the fact that the fashions usually did make a good story, editors loved to come to Paris. But at this point, most are finding it hard to justify such trips, which cost thousands of dollars and require filing miles of dreamy copy every day. Prudence Glynn, fashion editor of The Times (London) was the first to drop day-by-day, blow-by-blow coverage, settling for a single round-up story.
But Americans, who have to

Averell Harriman Gives Collection Of 23 Paintings to U.S. Gallery

By Paul Richard WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (WP). paintings to the United States W. Averell Harriman, 80, American diplomacy's enduring elder statesman, has given the core of his collection of French impressionist and post-impressionist National Gallery of Art. The Harriman gift consists of 23 choice pictures that he and his late wife, Marie, acquired over more than 30 years.

Rousseau is represented. Georges Seurat, Courbet and Degas. The Harriman Matisse is as fine a painting by the artist as the gallery now owns.

The exact value of the pictures is guesswork but the worth of the collection as a whole is surely many millions of dollars.

Mr. and Mrs. Harriman lived in Washington for many years but the collection is in a sense a New York collection. The late Mrs. Harriman culled many of its works from the pictures that passed through the gallery she ran on 57th Street, when her husband was governor of New York.

Mr. Harriman has stated that one strong motivating factor for the gift to the Washington museum was the gallery's new National Lending Program. He asked that the pictures be made available to art museums throughout the United States.

Until recently the gallery never allowed its European works to leave Washington on loan. Under the lending program, much of the collection—save such fragile panel paintings as its Da Vinci—will be available.

Three of the Harriman paint ings-the 1905 Picasso, a Céranne landscape, and "Words of the Devil," by Gauguin—went on view today in the lobby of the gallery. The rest will be on view as a group in a new building that opens in 1975.

The French object to this idea because they claim that, with 850 exhibitors at the Porte de Ver-sailles salon, it is next to impossible to make a fair selection. The way to get around this problem would be to follow what Florence does with its showings in the Pitti Palace. The houses on the runway are those which can produce substantial export figures.

But the real bonus would be if the Paris high-fashion designers would stop being such stiffe about the whole thing and stop insisting that couture is what it was 20 years ago. I have it on what I believe to be excellent authority that he found himself obliged to cut 300 peges out of his manuscript. He cut out the wrong 300. The soul of his book was left lying on the cutting room floor.

It is understandable, I suppose, that an author writing a book called "The Food of Italy" should say to himself, "My subfood." But Mr. Root's subject was not food, period: It was food considered as part of a whole cultural context, as he should have realized, since his own "The Food of France" enunciated this principle. By shearing away the cultural context. Mr. Root reduced considerable his proofs. This enables me to disclose what he so misguidedly ect is food; therefore I will eliminate what is extraneous to stretches of this book to mere catalogues of dishes, pretty dull reading. Since I am not yet covered by the Statute of Limitations, I shall not disclose by what James-Bond-like methods I managed to lay hands on Mr. Root's original muscript, and even on a set of painting; and indeed in those chapters where it was pertinent, Mr. Root had related a region's cooking with that region's painting. He subsequently cut these passages out, and, I am reliably informed, threw all but one into the wastebasket, which is too bad, for if he had saved them he would have a separate book now. Somehow the section in which an analogy is drawn between Umbrian cooking and Um-brian painting was not thrown away. I have read it, and to me it seems more interesting than anything which actually got into the book

Mr. Root's second great error was to eliminate his colorful accounts, which he must have regarded as dividuous, of the glittering swashbuckling bellicose magnificent unscrupulous great families—the Estes, the Sforzas, the Visconti, et al-who for several centuries dominated Italy. Thus we lost such anecdotes as the reply of the Great Countess to Cesare Borgia, when be threat-ened to kill her children, whom he was holding as hostages, unless she yielded a city she was defending against him: "I am young enough to make others." For such anecdotes I would willingly have sacrificed the enumerations of the different sorts of pasta or rice dishes available

Access to Mr. Root's original manuscript enabled me also to clear up one small point which had caught my attention. On page 14, one reads of petits pois: They were first imported into France from Genoa in 1660, as a present for Louis XIV," and on page 33 that they were introduced into France by Catherine de' Medici. The reference to Louis XIV does not appear in the origimanuscript, and I therefore deduce that it was added by some other hand than Mr. Root's. This impression was confirmed by a careful inspection of the page proofs, which revealed other gratuitous insertions of mism-formation. Mr. Root seems to have succeeded in suppressing all the others, but Louis XIV eluded him.

It was presumably the same hand which rewrote what the book's jacket calls Mr. Root's "characteristically brilliant prose." We all know that jacket blurbs are not to be taken seriously, but It seems strange that the same publisher who allowed one underling to write this line permitted another to substitute her proce for his. Emboldened perhaps by a B+ in English at Mount Holyoke, and undeterred by a complete lack of feeling for the English language, this rash edi-tor made hash of Mr. Root's text, ending up sometimes with such complete monstrosities as verbless sentences. Most of this damage Mr. Root was able to rectify also, but lame, stilted phrasing remains here and there where he was reluctant to demand the resetting of large gobs of type to restore clarity.

I would not like to leave you with the impression that there is oo good writing in this book. There is a delightfully nostalgic reminiscence of old Modena quoted from the local writer Pranco Vanni: a sensitive tribute to the colorfulness of Venetian food quoted from Elizabeth David; an interesting comparison of ancient Etruria and modern Tuscany quoted from Jacques Heurgon; a snatch of verse on the eels of Comacchio quoted from Torquato Tasso; a withy passage concerning fish chowder quoted from the late A J. Liebling; and many others. I thought I had spotted somewhere a commendable paragraph by Mr. Root himself, but if so I have mislaid my note concerning it. It is only fair to report that all of the reviews I have seen of this book (and I have seen a good many) were favorable, some even enthusiastic. This is a phenomenon I am unable to understand.

Mr. Root has reviewed other books. They appeared in the Paris edition of the Chicago Tribune from 1930 through 1934.

Industrial Orders Off BONN, Feb. 2 (AP-DJ).—The Economics and Finance Ministry today reported a 75 percent drop in industrial orders received last December compared with the 1970

The ministry pointed out the decrease was considerably larger than the 5.9 percent average seasonal drop of the past five

The ministry said this was caused partly by the monetary crisis that lasted until mid-December last year and partly by a strike of metal workers that slowed down important sectors of the industry.

Domestic demand decreased 3.8 percent during December, more than the 3.7 percent seasons. average drop of the past five years. Orders from abroad decreased 1.4 percent, compared with their average seasonal upswing of 3 percent.

Canadian Oil Find 'Significant'

Imperial Oil of Canada has acknowledged for the first time that it discovered a significant oil field two years ago in the Arctic Mackenzie River delta area. The company says its previously reported Atkinson Point discovery well penetrated an encouraging and significant oil-bearing reservoir" with a "gross" thickness of 253 feet. The top 139 feet of this zone is "oil-bearing." Imperial, 70 percent owned by Standard Oil of New Jersey, is Canada's biggest oil company; it has previously released little information about the Aikinson Point well, located about 100 miles northeast of Inuvik, the far-north supply center on the Mackenzie River. Imperial has since reported three additional oil or gas discovery wells to the west of the initial find Information on those wells has also been sparso. Further details on the Atkinson Point well are experted later this month

ICL Expects Sales to Increase

International Computers Ltd. (ICL), of Britain, expects a moderate rise in sales in the year ending Sept. 30, chairman Sir John Wall says in his annual report. However, he says the forecast depends on his view that the recent slowdown in orders will not continue past the second half of 1972. In the face of fierce competition from U.S. computer companies, Sir John says, ICL's short-term objective is to maintain the level of earnings. ICL is prepared, as pre-viously stated, to join with European companies in strengthening the European industry against American domination, ho adds. But he rejects American domination, no across but he rejects the idea of the European industry cutting itself off from the U.S. industry. Negotiating from a position of strength with the U.S. companies wanting to join with European companies would follow from European cooperation, he says. Six John also warns that the Japanese computer industry will offer formidable competition to European companies.

U.K. Warehouse Center Planned Bankers Trust International, IMM Transport Services and British Anzani Engineering report they plan to build a multi-million-pound ware-house and distribution center at Felixstowe, on the North Sea. The companies say the complex could involve the investment of as much as £10 million. Bankers Trust International, a subsidiary of Bankers Trust of the United States, is to provide finance for the project, in which each of the partners is to have an equal interest.

Montedison Said to Eye Viscosa Montecatini Edison, Italy's leading chemical corporation and one of the largest in Europe, plans to acquire control of Snia Viscosa, Italy's largest producer of artificial fibers, according to well-informed industrial sources today. A state-ment on terms of the acquisition is expected soon, probably early next week, the sources said. Montedison already has a small interest in Viscosa. Recently, this interest was estimated at about 4 percent, although it may have been increased recently. Officials of Montedison were not immediately available for comment on the

U.K. Money Reserves Hit £2.6 Billion

LONDON, Feb. 2 (UPI) .-Britain's gold, dollar and official reserves climbed for the 18th successive month in January and hit a record high of £2.68 billion (86.98 billion) at the end of the month, the Treasury said today.

The flow of foreign funds into Britain and an allocation of special drawing rights (SDRs) announced in early January amounted to £153 million in a month when the pound gradually gained strength in terms of the dollar in busy foreign exchange markets.

The total reserves were more than double the figure last Jan-

The big jump followed a £204 million inflow in December, when reserves in 1971 as a whole were also doubled.

Boost to Share Prices The news made no real impact on an already very strong pound on foreign exchange markets but on the stock exchange industrial share prices started to climb. The new allocation of SDRs, or "paper gold." amounted to £124 million in January, so that the flow of foreign money into Britain at £29 million slowed compared with the floods seen for much of last year during the dollar

Officials said that the value of foreign currency reserves was based on the middle rate, or parity of $2,6057 to the pound, but the gold and SDR element in the reserves were calculated on the basis of $38 a fine ounce. This is the proposed higher price for gold soon to go before the U.S.

U.S. Pollution Rules Set on Foreign Autos

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (AP-DJ).-The Environmental Protec-Agency announced today publication of new regulations on the importation of motor vehicles into the United States. The regulations will require that any imported vehicle must be covered by a certificate of conformity with whatever U.S. air pollution emission standards ap-plied in the year the vehicle was

The requirements apply whether the vehicle is new or used and whether imported for personal use or sale

Under previous regulations, used motor vehicles and vehicles imported by individuals solely for personal use could be admitted without complying with U.S. emissions standards.

EPA administrator William D. Ruckelshaus emphasized that Americans who buy motor vehicles abroad should be aware of the change and should be certain that any vehicles purchased are built to U.S. emissions standards. If an American arrives in the United States with a vehicle that does not comply with the stan-dards, and the vehicle cannot be modified to conform, it will be denied final admission by the U.S. Bureau of Customs. This means that the importer will be required to deliver the vehicle for export or other disposition by customs.

Wall St. Offers Safeguard Plan

NEW YORK, Feb. 2 (NYT) .-Wall Street responded yesterday to the controversal proposals of the Securities and Exchange Commission governing the safekeeping of customers' cash and securities at brokerage houses. A joint committee of major securities industry organizations. including the nation's major stock exchanges, proposed its own plan in response to a SEC request for comment on its proposals, made last Nov. 8. Basically, the industry alternative plan would call for the creation of an "all-inclusive formula" for calculating on a daily basis the cash reserves that brokerage firms would have to set aside to back up customer deposits and credit balances.

SEC Backs Stock Market Membership for Institutions

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (AP-DJ).—The Securities & Exchange Commission (SEC) today endorsed a qualified form of stock exchange membership for broker-dealers affiliated with mutual funds and other big institutional investors.

In its long-awaited market-structure report, the SEC said it favors allowing such broker-dealers to be stock exchange members as long as the "predominant" portion of their brokerage business comes from unaffiliated public investors. The commission said "predominant" should mean "significantly more than half" the broker-dealer's business, but noted that a more precise definition should await comments from the exchanges and other interested parties, and perhaps even

In another key area, the SEC, as expected, said it would lower to $300,000 in April the order-value level above which brokers will have to negotiate fees with customers. Currently, the portion of an order that is above $500,000 is subject to broker-customer negotiation.

Institutional membership and negotiated rates are two of the hottest problems facing the securities industry. They dominated more than two months of SEC hearings, concluded late last year, that formed the basis for the current report.

Openings are important to all players, as East-West found on the diagramed deal from the Las Vegas Knockout final last month. At one table Pietro Forquet for the Blue Team played in three no-trump from the North side after opening one no trump and made it rather easily when East, lacking any information about his partner's spade suit, led the club jack.

Forquet won with the ace and led a heart to the jack. He cashed the chub queen and ducked a heart. East overtook the heart lead to play a spade, and 10 tricks were made.

In the replay South became the declarer after the standard auction shown in the diagram. Notice that South's second-round jump to two no-trump was forcing, following traditional methods. Many experts would bid three no-trump, reserving two no-trump as an invitational bid with about 11 highcard points.

Blue Team, made the normal lead of the spade eight. South won with the king and after testing clubs pinned his hopes on the heart finesse. When it lost, the defenders had five tricks.

South could, and perhaps should, have made the game in spite of receiving the spade lead. He could have inferred that Avarelli held five spades rather than four, since a lead from a fourcard suit headed by ace-queen would not be attractive when the bidding had marked declarer with the king.

Further, South could have worked out that the heart finesse was likely to lose. If West had held a good five-card spade suit together with an outside king, he would no doubt have bid on the first round, especially with the vulnerability in his favor. On this basis, South should have tested clubs, playing the queen and one top honor from the dummy. Then he should have led a spade, permitting West to take four tricks. This "suicide" play would eventually lead to a squeeze against East in hearts and clubs, after the play of the diamond winners. And if West refused to cash his spades, South could safely sucrender a heart trick to East.

IT is not easy being a 30-yearold virgin in this day and age, attests Fortune Dundy (Fortunée-"rhymes with have your say"-to the world), the heroine of Cynthia Buchanan's first novel. Or more to the point of the book, it is not easy for Fortune not to be a virgin.

In heavier hands, Fortune's plight might be the cause for some coarse pseudo-ribaldry, but Miss Buchanan has more serious purposes in mind. Fortune's hunger for this Ismale rite de passage goes deeper than technical defloration: she wants Man, she wants love, she desperately yearns for fulfillment from the other half of the human

Fortune is all frills, furbelows, falls and ostrich feathers—a 1950s person, really: "Her airs draw on the cinema, on the 1950s, on Loretta Young on Ann Blyth, on the mannered billowing, too, from fiction—Blanche Dubois..." She consigns her maidenly state to a gross and garish California apertment known as Dionysus West:

Her amorous attemptslimned with satirical disgust-involve a lesbian named Rusty, who obviously isn't what she had in mind, a Hollywood stant man with a taste for the kinky who cannot rise to the occasion and a handsome dentist, her roomie's ex-husband. The roomie, "Bisquit" Besqueth, is now playing footsie with an adman named Campbell, has stabled her first husband with a fork and engages in sado-masochistic fun and games with boyfriend within Fortune's hearing.

How Fortune's dreams almost come true—and Miss Buchanan's descriptive powers are up to the import of the scene—are part of the surprise (but not unmotivated) ending. I found it a bit drastic but plausible. "Maiden" also suffers from the usual first-novel blinkers—for example, we know hardly anything about Fortune's past. Miss Buchanan also grows overly fond of Fortune, who speaks in a mixture of Miss Adelaide, Mehitabel and Blanche Dubois. One wishes, too, for a stronger parrative impulsion.

Still, Fortune is a touching, funny character, unlike any I've come across in years, and to have created ber represents a considerable achievement,

As competitors went through final preparations here, the Games were overshadowed by the campaign of International Olympic Committee president Avery Brundage against commercialism in sport, particularly Alaine skiine.

The Austrian Aimine and Nordic ski teams at first decided to withdraw from the games after veteran Alpine ace Schranz was declared ineligible because of involvement in commercial advertising.

The Austrians finally bowed to an emotional appeal today by Schranz to stay in the Games, in which they have a good chance of taking several medals.

The threat that many top skiers would be excluded has himg over the Sapporo Games for months, and may not yet be completely settled. Brundage told a press conference earlier this week that though Schranz was the only one so far singled out, other competitors might be barred during the Games. Skiing lost another top com-

A Plan for the Ghetto

WASHINGTON.—As part of his North Vietnamese who are out overall plan President Nixon has offered North Vietnam $2.5 billion to rebuild its country once the war is over. Even critics of the President consider this a most generous sum of money to ba given to a nation that Mr. Nixon still refers to in the most unflattering terms.

I have a friend named Zugsmith, who works with people in the

"If it's a civil war, you have to win the hearts and minds of the people," I agreed.

"You got it, man. Nobody gives a damn about the hearts and minds of the people in the ghetto because there are no Commics there. You sprinkle five or six hundred Reds around and America has to give us everything we ask for."

"There should be a hole in your plan," I said, "but I can't find it." "You're going to have some shooting in the ghetto but no more than you have now. Maybe some people are going to be captured by the North Vietnamese. but with POWs Nixon is going to be forced to find a solution to the problem. Of course he'll insist on us having our own government, which is something we don't have right now. And he might even call for elections in the South supervised by the United Nations. You can't ask for better than thet."

"The beauty of your plan," I said, "Is that if you fight Com-munists in the ghetto, you'll be the good guys."

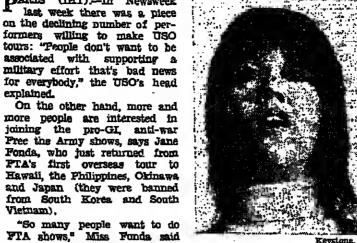

"My thinking exactly. We'd have everyone in Congress praising us to the skies. Agnew might even come and visit us and hand out medals."

"The only problem you have, as I see it," I said, "is bow do you get the North Vietnamese to come to the ghetto in Washington? It isn't really a place they'd want to light for."

"Til admit that's had me stymied," Zugsmith said, "but then I read about all that money Nixon was handing out, I figure if he's willing to pay the North Vietnamese $2.5 billion to get out of South Vietnam, there is no telling what the President will offer them to get out of Wash-ington, D.C."

At the start of Jane Fonda's activism there was some jeering -Tm 34, I didn't become active until I was 32 for God's sake," she herself says and some harassment, as when she was arrested for bringing drugs into the United States from Canada (the "drugs," it turned out, were vitamin pills).

The harassment is over-"I don't travel with so many vitamin pills," she says with a small smile—and many Americans who disagree with Jane Ponda's politics have been moved by her sincerity. The sense of new maturity and thoughtfulness has been reflected in her work: As one beaming matron says to another upon leaving a movie house in a New Yorker cartoon. PEOPLE: The Truth

Men get their kicks where they find them. Some go over Nisgara Falls in a barrel. Others swallow goldfish or sit on flagpoles. Paul Wills puts ferrets down his trousers. Wills, 29, who keeps a family of the vicious, razor-toothed rodents at his Cambourne, England, home (ferrets terrorize rabbits and other small game), just up and decided the other day to pop a pair of 'em down his pants—perhaps for the sheer hell of it, perhaps simply because they were there (who dare question the motives of men of destiny?).

Establishing his own rules—no protective garments allowed; loose-fitting trousers to be secured top and bottom with twice to block the critters' normal escape routes-Wills, a textile machinist in his spare time, gathered himself together at the local Basset Arms pub. While women gasped and strong men giggled Wills checked a stopwatch, dropped the ferrets down, and sweat-ed it out for precisely two minutes, claiming a world record which isn't likely to be challenged in the recent future. "They bit through my trousers," he said after the ordeal, "but not through anything else."

Later, Wills allowed as he had practiced a little at home, suffering three stitches when one of the beastles chawed a thumb during rehearsal. Said wife Judith in one of those statements wives are inclined to make: "If it had been anything else than his finger I don't know what I'd have done."
